When used legitimately this is great, but the problem is who has access and how they gain it. Under no circumstances do I want anyone to have access to my personal electronic information. It is already overly available and overly exploited.   Government backdoors provide backdoors for anyone with the time, expertise and technology to take advantage of their existence. I want none of it, and I will vote my feelings on the subject whenever possible.

Kirstin Mulcahy